Sounds like something in there is corrupted, if you can't find an installed app or file responsible Best method for clearing is a soft reset, note that this will delete all user data from the device so back up first (contacts, messages, settings etc) type *#7370# into the phone this will essentially reformat it and return it to an out of box state restore your data from your back up Backed up data, reset phone (8#7370#) and again tried to update the software, but got the same error message:! Device Recovery Nokia software updater has lost connection with your device: 1.. Re-insert the USB cable Click 'OK' below to continue updating Nokia N95 8GB → RM-421.. Remove USB cable from your device Restart the device (turn off and turn on again).. Trying to rack my brains here I've seen this 'Untrusted software found on mass memory' before.. On bootup 'I've found an uninstalled app in mass memory so I'm installing it 2 minutes later I give you the only messages that are available for a situation like this.. Tries this procedure on my desktop PC with Windows Vista, then tried on my Laptop with Windows XP; got same problem with both!This is exasperating! Ok one last thing to try The Hard Reset, you are backed up so no worries 1.. 'Installation failed' then 'Untrusted software found on mass memory Go to Application manager to install it'.. Tried this procedure on my desktop PC with Windows Vista, then tried on my Laptop with Windows XP; got same problem with both!This is exasperating!
